A Holiday Tragedy.

All my life I had been-well, not exactly woman bater, but a firm believer in the dea that man is the lord of creation, and that woman is not an absolute necessity For many years it was my proud boast that was able to dispense with feminine aid and yet live a very enjoyable life, as, with clockwork regularity, I went from my bachelor lodgings to business each morning, returning in the afternoon and speding the evening at the club or some place of amusement. The idea of baving a lady companion in my rambles never entered

True, my landlady-good old soul-pre pared my meals and cleaned my rooms but that was because I had not time to do it myself, and a man servant was beyond my means. But in all else I dispensed with woman's aid. Boot cleaning, sewing butions on, lighting the fire, etc., were all done with my own hands-nay, at a pinch I have even washed a pocket handkerchief.
I desire to stand forth as a living example of the original Adam and a proof of the superfluity of the modern Eve. But my misguided companions refused to profit by my teachings or to follow my example. One by one they fell under fe-male influence, one by one they married and then-I cut them dead. Ah, me! Those free Eobemian days were happy ones, as year after year I pursued my adopted course, in spite of the continual falling off of my comrades. Then came a time when my circle of ac quaintances had decreased so considerably that I began to feel lonely. Bachelor chums were more difficult to find than ever. To loneliness succeeded melancholy, and a grew miserable and pessimistic One friend, to whom I said bare my woes

"You keep to yourself too much. What you ought to do is to lodge with some family where there are two or three grown-up daughters. They would wake you up a bit." This, to me, the hitherto ideal advocate of an Eveless Eden! And yet, after the advice had been tendered several times. I began to think that such a change might be beneficial. Such a course need not involve the rendering up of my tenets; but as woman still formed a part of the world, she might at least contribute to my amuse ment. So, after very serious considera-tion, I decided to seek new apartments, with light society thrown in. Now my troubles commenced. I could not make the direct inquiry, "Have you any grown up daughters?" So I generally viewed the rooms, listening to the land lady's verbiage, settled the rent, and then casually asked, "Have you any children?" and the reply would be, "Yes, 'four,' 'five,' or 'six' (as the case might be); "the eldest is ten years old and the youngest two months. But they are as good as gold and never make a bit of noise."

The numberless journeys I made and the pany desultory conversations I listened to were all to no purpose. No one appeared to ossess grown up daughters—the eldest was always ten. Just when I was about to abandon my search, fortune-or was it fate led me to Myrtle Villa, Paradise Gardens, Upper Dalwich. The door was opened by a vision of lodeliness, faultlessly dressed, and with bright blue eyes and golden hair. "Newly married," thought I; "well, here at least the eldest won't be ten!" She invited me in, and then disappeared; a mid die-aged lady entering directly after, we proceeded o discuss terms. Then came the inevitable inquiry as to children

"I have two grown-up daughers, the ounger of whom opened the door for you." At last! Need I say that within a week I was installed in Myrtle Vilia? The landlady -a widow-was a genial, homely woman, and the youngest daughter, Annie, aged twenty-five, I have already described, but the other daughter, Julia, did not impress me favorably. She was neither good looking nor pleasing, and, without being exactly had tempered, always insisted upon having her own way.

I now seemed to be in a new world. My boots bore a brilliant luster each morning without my aid, and my slippers were laid ready for me in the evening, and as for would only be too happy.

I no longer needed to seek recreation at the clubafter the labors of the day. Julia played the piano well (her only accomplishment), while Annie saug divinely, and thus the evenings passed all too quickly. Male acquaintances they did not seem to possess yet, stay, there was one—a Mr. Malcolm, whose name I frequently heard mentioned, but as his calls were always made in the daytime, I never saw him. passed into that condition of mind which raised a feeling of jealousy on his ac-count, so one day I questioned my landlady on the subject.

Once we thought he would have proposed to Julia, but nothing came of it."

What a relief! Only Julia!

What a relief! Only Julia!

So time went pleasantly on, and then—how can I confess it—my lifelong creed was thrown to the winds, my proud ambition humbled in the dust, and I became a willingslave to the sex I had so long despised and Ignored. My only thought now was and ignored. My only thought now was how, and in what words. I should beseech my darling Annie to become my wife. Time after time I was on the point of speaking, but Julia always turned up at the critical

One evening Julia announced that a week hence she had an engagement to play at a oncert. Then burst upon me a brillians inspiration. I purchased two stall tick-ets for the Lyceum for that same evening, and, making pretence that I had had them given to me, I persuaded Annie to promise to accompany me. This time Julia would not be able to intrude, and I should know my fate. In two months' time I should be taking my summer holiday, which would fit in just nicely for the honeymoon.

On the eventful day I hastened homeward with a queer fluttering in my heart and a flower spray for Annie in my hat. Julis enter before she informed me that Annie had been out in the hot sun, and had been obliged to go to bed with a very bad sick headache. My fluttering heart gave one huge bound and then seemed to stand still However, to disguise my feelings

HE SHOWS HIS GRATITUDE. Bocchino Keeps His Vow for Recovery From Illness. Michael Bocchino had a big time last night in celebrating his recovery from a serious illness twenty-eight years ago. As stated in yesterday's American, he made a vow to the Virgin Mary to observe August 23 of each year as a holiday if he recovered from his illness. Upon the altar which he had erected near his home, Fifth and Bank streets, Highlandtown, he, therefore, celebrated the feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel. A large crowd of people was present to witness the event. They saw the statue of the Virgin taken from the altar by a girl robed in white, and then carried at the head of a procession through the streets of the suburb. The line was formed with two boys carrying ban-ners at the head, then a hand, and finally a large number of children. The status was replaced when the procession returned to the starting point. After that a display of fireworks was made, a sheep was raffled off at 25 cents a chance, and the festivities were at an end.-Rahimore

Novelist Crockett Rises Every Day at Four.

The Scotch novelist, S. R. Crockett, was at one time pastor of a country church at a salary of $1,200 a year. His income at the present time is estimated at $12,000 annually. He is an early rise; as follows concerning this habit: "Every morning, summer and winter, I've had my cold tub, and am ready to begin work at 4:30 o'clock. I should feel I'd missed one of the keenest pleasures in life in missing the sunrise. I always go out to look at it. no matter how busy I may be. I seem to see the world recreated then, and to share in the sense of being newly born myself. Perhaps I've gone to bed discouraged, feeling it is not-never can be-in me to do the work I would do. But in the dawn everything seems possible for me. Six hours' sleep is all I take, because it's all I need." Mr. Crockett is a typical looking Scotchman, with a full beard and brawny arm.—New
